To the worthily accomplished, the true Favourer of Ingenuity and learning, Mr. Robert Richardson of London, Merchant.

Worthy Sir,

Not like a rich Merchant do I offer at the Office of your vertuous acceptance, the precious and Princelike treasures that Forreign Countries afford; but as a rural Swain, a part of the fleece of my meaner flock do I prostrate at the nobler footsteps of your general and just esteem of the pleasant paths of ingenuity and studie. Here is nothing that I dare entitle to your Patronage, your knowledge being beyond the best this worthless work contains; nor can the Etimology of Names deserve his smile, that is so universally read in the natures and dispositions of men. But (give me leave adversatively to demonstrate my respects!) although your knowledge and parts were like a Pyramis, able to mate the Heavens, yet this small Manual may bring to your mind what you have long since learned; and serve (at least without the company of greater Volumes) to assist you with a sudden solution o the Original of the Names of either your Friends, Foes, or such as are strangers unto you; as also to evidence the unfeigned affection and gratitude of

Honoured Sir,

Your most humble Servant,

T. T.
